VOCUS ANNOUNCES NEW NON-EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Vocus Group Limited ('Vocus', ASX: VOC) announces today that Ms Julie Fahey will join the Vocus Board as Non-Executive Director, effective 2 February 2018. Ms Fahey has more than 30 years' experience in technology and the management of large-scale transformation programs, including as National Managing Partner, Markets and National Lead Partner, Telecommunications, Media & Technology for KPMG.

Prior to her leadership roles with KPMG, Ms Fahey's executive career spanned a range of roles including Chief Information Officer of General Motors Holden (Australia) and Deputy Managing Director of SAP Australia. Ms. Fahey retired from the KPMG partnership in 2014. Since that time, Ms Fahey has undertaken a number of independent engagements, amongst others, acting as consultant and adviser to a number of corporates and state government entities in relation to major transformation programs and IT capability.

Ms Fahey is currently a non-executive director with IRESS Ltd and Seek Ltd. She is also a non-executive director of a small number of IT&T companies, and a not-for-profit organisation.

Ms Fahey holds a Bachelor of Applied Science in Mathematics from RMIT.

Chairman of Vocus, Vaughan Bowen, said "We are very pleased to welcome Julie to the Vocus Board. Julie's depth of experience in technology and transformation gained over many years, in both executive and non-executive capacities, will be extremely valuable to the Company. I look forward to working with Julie as we execute the transformational strategy that will build a next generation telecommunication company."
